1. How to use this guide

Your funding workflow

- Build one master document folder with your ID, results, proof of income, proof of residence, acceptance or application letters, CV and motivation letter.
- Shortlist opportunities by field first, then by year of study, province, citizenship, minimum marks and closing date.
- Apply to as many legitimate bursaries as you qualify for. Students may apply for multiple bursaries for which they qualify.
- Track every application, confirmation email and follow-up date. Missed correspondence is one of the easiest ways to lose an opportunity.

2. Funding landscape in South Africa

The core opportunity types

Type	What it usually means for applicants
Government bursaries	Often linked to provincial priorities, scarce skills, public service needs or local municipality funding. Requirements differ between departments and provinces.
Corporate bursaries	Usually aligned to the funder's talent pipeline. They may prefer fields such as accounting, engineering, IT, actuarial science, commerce, health, science or mining.
University and institutional scholarships	May be merit-based, need-based, faculty-specific or linked to postgraduate research.
Foundation and trust bursaries	Often focus on social impact, financial need, academic promise, leadership or a specific community.
SETA and sector bursaries	Usually aligned to skills development within a sector such as finance, services, ICT, manufacturing, education, safety or health.
International scholarships	May require strong academic results, leadership evidence and early planning because documentation can be extensive.

3. How to shortlist the right opportunities

The five filters

Filter	Question to answer	Action
Field fit	Does the bursary fund your exact qualification or a close field?	Keep if yes; pause if unclear; discard if no.
Academic level	Does it fund Grade 12, first-year, undergraduate, postgraduate, TVET, Honours, Masters or PhD study?	Keep if yes; pause if unclear; discard if no.
Eligibility	Check citizenship, financial need, marks, institution, province, age, disability status and demographic requirements.	Keep if yes; pause if unclear; discard if no.
Deadline	Prioritise the nearest closing dates first. A closing date is the final day to apply; late applications are usually rejected.	Keep if yes; pause if unclear; discard if no.
Application burden	Estimate how much evidence is needed and whether you can submit a complete application before deadline.	Keep if yes; pause if unclear; discard if no.

4. The documents you need before applying

Students are generally required to submit supporting documentation.

Master evidence pack

- Certified copy of South African ID or permanent residence permit, where applicable.
- Latest Grade 11 / Grade 12 results, Matric certificate or full tertiary academic record.
- Proof of application, provisional acceptance, firm acceptance or current registration on the institution's letterhead.
- Proof of household income: salary slips, affidavit of unemployment, SASSA letter, pension letter or other funder-specific proof.
- Proof of residence where the bursary is province, municipality or community-specific.
- Curriculum vitae for bursaries requiring leadership, work experience, community work or achievements.
- Motivational letter tailored to the funder and qualification.
- Reference letters or referee contact details from a teacher, principal, lecturer, employer, community leader or coach.
- Bank account details or institution fee statement, if requested by the bursary provider.

5. How to submit strong applications.

Before you apply

1. Read the full bursary page and identify the exact qualification, marks, institution and document requirements.
2. Check the application method: online form, downloadable form, email, post, hand delivery or university portal.
3. Confirm the closing date and time zone. Build in at least 48 hours of buffer.
4. Prepare answers offline before pasting into an online form.
5. Use a consistent email address and cellphone number that you check daily.

During the application

6. Answer every field honestly. Missing information can weaken an application because applicants may not be contacted to correct omissions.
7. Upload clear, legible documents in the required format and size.
8. Name files professionally and in the order requested.
9. Submit early enough to handle website downtime, certification delays or internet problems.
10. Save screenshots, confirmation emails and reference numbers.

After submitting

- Add the bursary to your tracker with status, date submitted and follow-up date.
- Check email, SMS and missed calls regularly. Some shortlisted candidates are invited to interviews.
- Prepare for an interview immediately after submitting high-priority applications.
- Keep applying until you receive signed confirmation of funding.

6. Motivational letter framework

Your motivational letter should connect your academic potential, financial need, chosen field, career plan and the funder's purpose. Keep it specific, structured and evidence-based.

Suggested structure

Section	What to include
Opening	State who you are, what you want to study, where you are applying or registered, and which bursary you are applying for.
Academic proof	Summarise marks, subjects, awards, leadership and consistent effort.
Financial need	Explain the funding gap clearly and respectfully. Provide facts rather than exaggeration.
Career purpose	Explain why the course matters and how it connects to a real career path.
Contribution	Show how you plan to contribute to your family, community, profession or country.
Closing	Thank the funder and state that your supporting documents are attached.

Premium letter checklist

- One page where possible.
- Tailored to the funder and field.
- No generic "I am hardworking" claims without proof.
- Clear link between funding and your future contribution.
- No spelling mistakes, missing attachments or copied template language.

7. Interview preparation

Some bursary programmes require interviews. Research the bursary programme and provider, understand application requirements, keep a copy of everything submitted and prepare answers without sounding robotic.

Questions to prepare

- Tell us about yourself.
- Why did you choose this course?
- Why do you deserve this bursary?
- What are your strengths and weaknesses?
- How will you use the bursary award?
- What are your long-term goals?
- What contribution can you make to our organisation or community?
- How have you overcome a challenge?

Questions you can ask the funder

- What does your organisation hope to achieve through this bursary?
- Are there mentoring, vacation work, alumni or graduate opportunities linked to the programme?
- What qualities do successful bursary recipients usually demonstrate?
